Hello Don here is Paul's account of the search for motors.

Subject: Marine 1 motor issues

Hi Chief,

We knew this day would come and we tried our best to get another season out of the motors but the end is here with a blown portside motor. That's the bad news.....

I have spent many hours researching, calling, and emailing Honda dealers, or wholesalers, nationwide. I have been to find us Honda outboard motors new and used. There is an amazing long waiting list and major shortage of motors of any size.

There is a nation wide shortage and pricing will be going up 10 to 20 % next year. See this article:

<https://www.google.com/amp/s/www.powerandmotoryacht.com/.amp/special-report/power-motoryacht-investigates-outboard-shortages>

The Honda motors you see in links below are old and not worth the money to take a chance on. We will run into the same motor problems or worse. They don't run.... I've been trying to get in touch with a person from an eBay ad for 5 days. I sent 10 emails and no responses.

I would not recommend to you and the town that we don't put any money into rebuilding the old portside motor at Portland Yacht. We have tried a re-build already. The motor now has 1000 + hours and are parts are very hard to find. Parts will continue to be hard to find in the future. We will run into the same thing with the starboard side motor soon enough. It also has the same hours and years of use.

GOOD NEWS TIME...

Deke found an amazing deal with a Maine Yamaha dealer. We did the research for converting over to Yamaha Motors on Marine 1 from the Honda motor setup. The dealer has no concerns or worries converting from Honda to Yamaha. This is our best option. All things happen for a reason and finding this incredible deal right here in Maine is crazy good. A dealer having two 300 hp on his floor, ready to be installed in 2 weeks, which again, is unheard of. They are here and can be ours to own. If we don't act now this deal and our rescue season will be gone, which is the scary part of this conversation. The lake is exploding with boats on the lake this year and so many inexperienced boaters at the wheel.

We are very prepared and ready to service the community with our Marine unit. We have been preparing and training for such a busy boating season, hoping to save lives on Sebago when needed. We were fortunate that Marine 1 was operational for the recent tri-athlon held from St. Joseph's College and other calls this year. It's not like we are the only boat on the water, but we are the biggest, most stable, specially built for rough ocean seas. With our trained personnel in Marine 1, we can motor through any storm or waves to reach victims in distress to save a life, Yamaha motors are a great motor. I have owned many of them. They will last us 10+ years with our dedicated crew providing consistent care and maintenance for the boat.

Please consider this request so we can do our jobs that we have trained for many years. We cannot stop now since the town of Raymond, and the Raymond Fire Association, have invested so much into Marine 1 already. All of this is meant to save lives on the water and represent our town. Please get Marine 1 back in service.

Thank you for your quick consideration of this matter,
Paul Rogers

All of these used and abused Motors below are research only. I would not recommend to purchase any of these motors.

Hello Don

The Steering issue would be repaired when the new motors are installed. It is a very common thing to occur.
